With the generous support of the artists involved

"I have not made detailed directions for Musicircus. You simply bring together under one roof as much music (as many musical groups and soloists) as practical under the circumstances. It should last longer than ordinary concerts, start at 7 or 8 in the evening, and continuing, say, to midnight. Arrange performers on platforms or within roped-off areas. There must be plenty of space for the audience to walk around. If you have more groups than places, make a schedule: Group 1 in Place A from 7-9:30; Group 23 in Place A from 9:45-midnight. Etc. There should be food on sale and drinks (as at a circus). Dancers and acrobats." – John Cage, letter dated June 6, 1973

This work has drawn current practising artists into a celebration of the liberating spirit of chance, rigour and collaboration championed by Merce Cunningham and John Cage. We have constructed this event through a process of invitation and chance operation. Performers times were drawn out by chance, at five minute intervals, beginning at 6:48pm. Please feel free to wander to and from each performance as you see fit, and enjoy the wider textures of sound and sight.

For descriptions of individual artists' works and biographies please see http://www.melbournefestival.com.au.

"It is possible to imagine that the artists whose work we live with constitute an alphabet by means of which we spell our lives." – John Cage

"Some years ago ... we gave a Musicircus ... in a large gymnasium. We simply had as much going on at a single time as we could muster. And we exercised no aesthetic bias ... You should let each thing that happens happen from its own center, whether it is music or dance. Don't go in the direction of one thing using another. Then they will all go together beautifully (as birds, airplanes, trucks, radios, etc. do)." – John Cage, letter dated 17 February 1979
